Louisianan Seized As Killer of Two

Single Charge From Shotgun Fells Victims in Trespassing Quarrel

ALEXANDRIA, La.—(AP)—Evangelical parish officers Friday arrested Erlis Elliott, 35, as the slayer of two young men with a single charge from a shotgun.

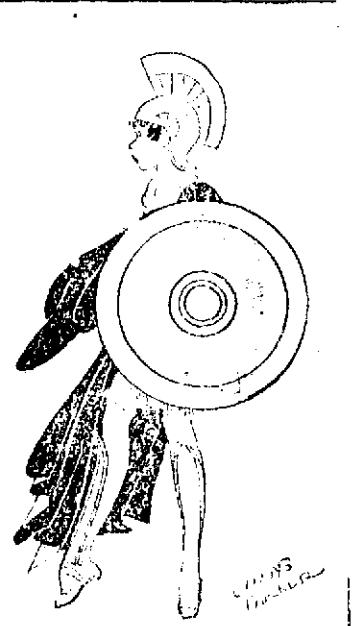

The dead are Alton Welsh, 19 and Dell Warton, 30, shot and wounded mortally in Warton's automobile in what officers believed was a row over trespassing on the Elliott property.

The shooting occurred late Thursday in Evangeline parish near the Allen parish line. Elliott afterward went to Oakdale, a few miles away, and surrendered.

The motor of the automobile still was running when Austin Swearingen, city marshal of Oakdale, arrived at the scene. He said that Welsh died shortly after shooting and Warton was found slumped in the car with a pump gun across his lap, but the weapon had not been fired. Warton died early Friday.

Only one shell was fired, the charge spraying both men about their heads, Elliott claimed self defense.

New Chevrolet Is On Display Here

1932 Models Feature Free-Wheeling and Syncro-Mesh Shift

The 1932 Chevrolet line of automobiles went on display Saturday morning at the showrooms of the Young Chevrolet company, East Second street, with a steady throng of visitors testifying to the nation-wide interest in this announcement of General Motors cars.

The new Chevrolet has two features that have startled the motoring world recently—free-wheeling and silent syncro-mesh gear-shifting.

With free-wheeling, the new Chevrolet shifts gears in traffic without using the clutch; and for mountain driving or rough going elsewhere, the free-wheeling can be locked out, giving the driver positive control again.

With the syncro-mesh feature, the driver of the new Chevrolet can shift downward without clashing the gears. He can drop out of high gear into second while moving at a fast clip in order to take a mountain grade, or to accelerate quickly in traffic.

The new Chevrolet six-cylinder motor develops 60 horsepower, and puts the car over the road at from 65 to 70 miles an hour, with much faster records reported from the General Motors proving grounds.

The 1932 motor features downward carburetion and instantaneous starting. The valves are water-cooled to prevent warping, and the air entering the engine is filtered through a screen mounted on top of the carburetor.

Most sensational of all the features of the new Chevrolet however, are its marvelous body lines. A sloping windshield merges directly with the roof, the outside sun-visor having been eliminated. Big crown fenders bulge out from either side of the hood, and adjoining them are large convex-lens headlights. The standard vots of the hood have been replaced by large square pots—four on each side—which are opened and shut by individual slim handles of chrome plate.

The coach doors are hung on bronze hinges, being singularly free of action. Door-latches do not bind, but open easily at a touch.

E. P. Young, owner of Young Chevrolet company, has a carload of the new models on the floor at the East Second street showrooms. Saturday he was featuring three models in particular—the standard coupe, the deluxe sedan, and the two-door coach.

Dedication of New Science Building Is Held at Conway

Dr. Robert A. Millikan, Noted Scientist Was Principal Speaker

LARGE ATTENDANCE

Representatives of Nearly All Colleges in State Attend Service

CONWAY.—(AP)—Dr. Robert A. Millikan, noted scientist, in dedicating a new science building at Hendrix College Saturday morning warned of the danger of "pushing over the top many, and especially unqualified students into the higher educational system under the influence of the state subsidy."

It is the tendency, he declared, "which may well give us no little concern here as well as in Germany."

The new science building is a gift of the Rockefeller foundation.

Dr. Millikan said it would be, "a public disaster if the influence of privately supported institutions were free from all political motivation and control were weakened."

He declared that state subsidies of any kind dangerous and lead to government paternalism from which Europe is suffering.

He cited Germany as an example of where state subsidy of education crowds many into the higher educational fields who have no aptitudes.

Introducing Dr. Millikan, Dr. John Hugh Reynolds, president of Hendrix College, said that the occasion was a significant one for Arkansas.

"Hendrix College, like the church which founded it, is not afraid of the truth, even in the field of science," Dr. Reynolds said.

Representatives of nearly all the colleges in Arkansas and some out of state visitors attended the ceremonies.

Prisoner Admits Killing Paralytic

J. W. Poole Declares He Shot Lawrence C. Harvey in Self-Defense

LETTINTO.—J. W. Poole, aged 42, confessed to officers at Lepanto Friday that he shot and killed Lawrence A. Harvey, 42-year-old paralytic, Wednesday night. Poole declared, however, that he fired in self-defense.

Mrs. Gussie Harvey, 41, estranged wife of Harvey and former wife of Poole, and Nannie Holiday, 35, roomer at Mrs. Harvey's home, arrested in connection with the killing, were exonerated by Poole and were released.

Poole told Deputy Sheriff A. E. Vance of Folsom county and Mayor J. N. Bonds of Lepanto that Harvey went to his ex-wife's home Wednesday and created a disturbance. He said Harvey fired into the house and then went to the back porch, poured kerosene on the floor and started to set fire to the building. When Poole remonstrated with him he said, Harvey made an effort to draw a pistol and Poole said he then fired.

After waiving preliminary hearing before Justice Thurman, Poole was ordered held to the grand jury. He was returned to jail.

A coroner's jury investigated the killing Wednesday night, returning a verdict of suicide. However, officers learned Harvey was a paralytic and had little use of his hands, and decided it would have been impossible for him to have fired a shot into his head behind the ear. They started an investigation which resulted in the arrest of Poole and the two women.

He had a vision of more than $100,000.

Snell will probably be the floor leader.

Pork Program for County Proposed

Mutual Livestock Group Pushing Culture of Pure-Bred Swine

A co-operative plan of livestock development was introduced for this section of the state Friday night at the meeting of the Kiwanis club at the Capital Hotel. It is a plan to loan a pure-bred sow to each of 100 Hempstead county farmers for one year or less, the farmer to keep half the offspring in return for feeding; the remainder to go to the corporation as pay for furnishing the sows, to cover the cost of maintaining a herdsmen to inspect, protect and supervise the feeding of the sows.

The corporation is now being organized among the business men of 10 counties in Arkansas, with a view to getting Arkansas in the pork-production business at a time when there is a surplus of feed, and small prospect of a fair price for cotton for some time to come according to those who are heading the firm, the Southern Live Stock & Finance Corp.

The club had invited the company representatives to meet with them Friday. T. W. Steele, president of the organization, and master farmer, of Scott, Ark., spoke briefly, calling attention to the sad plight of him and all others who have been trying to make money in growing cotton. He told how the average farmer could pay his taxes and interest through the growth of improved type hogs.

C. A. Allen, nationally known livestock authority, vice-president, and general manager, and originator of the plan, which was introduced so successfully in Multree, Ga., in 1927, according to his recommendations, explained that the plan was an effort to get this, and nine other sections of the state into hog raising through a co-operative plan of financing care and feeding, and cooperative marketing of the grown hogs. The hog has been much overlooked in the South as a money-maker, he said. Yet Southern states can excel any other section in producing hog feed. What Arkansas needs at this time is something that will grow into money quickly, and what crops or livestock can be produced to put money into the farmers' pockets quicker than the hog and hog feed? Some years ago it was estimated that the state of Georgia raised and shipped about 40 to 60 carloads of hogs per year. A hog growing movement, similar to the one being introduced here, was organized in Georgia, and last year 300,000 hogs were produced and slaughtered in three counties centering around Multree, Ga., the starting point of the movement. It is estimated that about forty million dollars worth of pork and pork products are shipped into and consumed by Arkansas each year. The farmer cannot blame the bankers for not having the money to finance all his activities when he is purchasing most all of his meat from other states. Thus sending the money that should be kept in banks at home, out of the community.

"We do not advocate the farmer going into the hog business in a wholesale way, but each farmer should keep a few brood sows to raise his own pork, and pay his taxes and other bills," said Mr. Allen. "Taking all this into consideration we believe we are making one of the greatest moves to benefit the farmers and business in general the state has ever been offered."

His company will aid the farmer in marketing and breeding, and will also keep up a general education program for the benefit of the farmer who may not know how to grow hogs. After a hog has been loaned to a farmer, company herdsmen will inspect them and aid the farmer in.

Lowell R. Bayles in Crash At Detroit Airport Saturday

Trying for World's Speed Record When Accident Occurs

PLANE DEMOLISHED

Bayles' Body and Motor Are Hurlled From Wrecked Plane

DETROIT.—(AP)—Lowell R. Bayles, Springfield, Mass., speed flier, was killed at 1 o'clock Saturday afternoon when his plane struck the ground and burst into flames, while he was making another attempt at the world land speed record.

Bayles, who earlier in the week attained a speed of 244 miles an hour in his third attempt at the record, on the first lap of the fourth attempt.

He was about 75 feet up and going at a terrific speed over the measured course at the Wayne county airport, when suddenly the plane dipped, turned over three times and rammed into the ground.

Bayles' body and the motor, flames, were hurled from the plane.

DeQueen Robbery Probe at Standstill

Three Held at Hot Springs Probably Will Be Questioned

DEQUEEN, Ark.—Investigation of the $7000 robbery of the First National Bank of DeQueen was at a standstill Friday night as far as Sevier county officers were concerned.

Sheriff Jim Sutton said he was awaiting reports from Hot Springs officers who are holding Roy, Bole, 21, Roy Pierce, 25, and Jack Seay, 35, for questioning in connection with the robbery.

The sheriff said he had received a report that Bole is the son of a minister and lives about 10 miles west of here, but that no family was located during a tour of that section Friday afternoon.

The three men were arrested by Hot Springs authorities in possession of a car which corresponded with the description given of the machine in which the three men escaped after locking Terry Hunsucker and a bank customer in the vault.

They were also reported to have been seen here at 1 p. m. Thursday about a half hour after the bank was robbed. All three stoutly denied any connection with the robbery.

Sheriff Sutton said he and Hunsucker had not decided Friday night whether or not they would go to Hot Springs, Hunsucker having declared that the description of the men held failed to tally with those who robbed the bank.

Officers Trailing Bandit-Kidnapers

Posse of 15 Searching Bottoms of Caches River Near Jonesboro

JONESBORO.—Early arrest of two kidnaping-bandits who have been operating in Arkansas for the past week, was predicted by officers Friday night. A posse of more than 15 officers from Craighead, Cross and Jackson counties was searching the Caches river bottoms for two men who held up and kidnaped two men during the week and attempted to rob a filling station at Tuckerman Thursday night.

The officers had received information that the two thugs armed with sawed-off shotguns, spent Thursday night at a farm house near Tuckerman, after they had been forced to abandon their automobile about three miles from Tuckerman.

They left the farm house about 12 Friday morning, plunging into the river bottoms on foot. The posse was organized and started a search at noon. Late Friday night they were reported on the trail of the pair.

The thugs attempted to rob a filling station at Tuckerman and were fired upon by the town marshal, whose bullets punctured both the rear tires of this car forcing them to abandon the auto. It was identified as the one taken from W. H. Shivers at Conway last week when Shivers and Leo Crafton were kidnaped and robbed by the two men.

Before reaching Tuckerman Friday the pair kidnaped and robbed in a similar manner J. L. Gardner of Wynne and Drew Douglas of McCrory, the latter a filling station operator. They tied the two men to trees near McCrory. The men freed themselves after a brief struggle.

Understanding Wars
If you are interested in making an experiment in the backgrounds of war, you might try, some day, asking ten or dozen of your neighbors just what the present rumpus in Manchuria is all about.
The chances are that not one of the group will be able to give you an intelligent answer.
The newspapers have done an excellent job of presenting the issues involved. Yet the whole business is very far away, and the names of the men and places in the news dispatches are hard to pronounce and even harder to remember.
And most of us just can't become interested.
And that, when you stop to think about it, is just about what happens in most wars. When the trouble first pops up in the open issues are, generally, fairly clearly presented.
Both sides have a chance to present their arguments, and everyone who cares to study it out can get a pretty good notion of what is at the bottom of it all.
But few people take the trouble to do so; and presently it is too late. Real war begins, and from that moment it is impossible to get at the truth. The opening of actual fighting rouses passions and prejudices before which any objective weighing of rival assertions is impossible.
In 1914 the ordinary American paid only a casual attention to the rising of the war clouds. All through those tense July days we let the trouble overseas remain just what the Manchurian trouble is today—somewhat incomprehensible, about which we need not bother ourselves.
Then, in August, it became forever too late. War began.
Floods of propaganda rolled over the land. People who had something at stake in the war became stridently vocal. Our chance to get a dispassionate and equitable verdict on the conflict was gone.
Three years later this war that was so incomprehensible and remote had engulfed us.
No one knows just what is going to be the upshot of the difficulties in Manchuria. But whatever happens, now is the time for us to examine the situation and find out just exactly what is at the bottom of it. A little later it may be too late.

Amphibian War Tanks
NEWSPAPERS the other day printed pictures of a new tank devised by British army experts—an amphibian creation, that can swim through the water and use a formidable turret gun while it swims, and that can maintain a 42-mile speed on dry land. It is suggested that a fleet of these tanks would be extremely valuable to a general who was trying to land troops on a shore held by enemy forces.
Now the interesting thing, right here, would be to find out what the veterans of England's Gallipoli expedition of 1915 might think about it. For that expedition began with the landing of troops on beaches manned by Turkish soldiers with machine guns; and the landing resulted in casualties so heavy that the entire expedition was cursed from the start.
How many lives might not a few tanks of this kind have saved! The course of the whole war might have been altered.

Care of the Teeth
ONE of the significant developments of the fall season has been the decision by the American Dental Association, in recent convention at Memphis, to use advertising to educate the public about dental hygiene.
This in no way marks a break with the established rule that individual dentists are not to advertise themselves. The association as a whole will handle the matter through a new bureau, in an effort to keep the public informed about the proper care of the teeth; and the results should be highly beneficial.
The old saying about an ounce of prevention and a pound of cure is nowhere so apt as in the care of the teeth. If the association, through advertising, can drive the lesson home it will be doing the whole country a service.

Did Washington Swear?
THE question whether George Washington did or did not use swear words on occasion seems to have popped to the surface again. This time the eminent historian, Professor Albert Bushnell art, assures us that he did, and adds, "Thank God, he was a human being."
Probably it is all rather perplexing, and more or less disturbing, to a lot of good people who would like to picture the father of his country as a man without even a minor flaw;
but, after all, the whole business is not so very important.
You will read a history of the Revolutionary war, and the part Washington played in it, you will quickly discover that there were at least plenty of times when he had lots of propensity for swearing, whether he yielded to it or not. Perhaps we might as well let it go at that.

Don't crowd; the world is large enough.
For you as well as for me:
The doors of all are open wide—
The realm of thought is free.
In all earth's places you are right.
To choose the best you can—
Provided that you do not try To crowd some other man.
Don't crowd the good from out your heart.
By fostering all that's bad.
But give to every virtue, room.
The best that may be had;
Make each day's record such a one
That you might well be proud Give each his right—give each his room.
And never try to crowd.—Selected.

feeding them, and the office in keeping posted on its condition.

R. J. Worthington, representative of the company, told how there were more than 243,000 farms in Arkansas, according to the 1930 census, only 35,657 of which had any hogs on their farms, and a bumper feed crop to feed all the hogs which could be produced.

The hog is by far the most valuable farm animal in utilizing farm wastes, and in converting the feed so easily marketable product, he said. Especially when the company establishes their contemplated marketing connections.

Business men are to be asked to finance 100 brood sows, with a lien on the sows and all other assets of the company until the investment is returned, after returning the original investment, through their ownership of common stock in the company. Income to the company will be derived from the company's half of the operating less expenses of operating. No company officer is to draw a salary until the original investment has been repaid.

The Kiwanis Club is presenting the plan to the business men of the city, and asking them to consider the movement, which the Kiwanis club voted to adopt.

Guests of the club were Charles Harrell and Roy Anderson, who has spent considerable time and energy in selling this section of the possibility of "sows, sows and hogs on every farm." C. F. Erwin was introduced as a new member of the club.

Each day at Buckingham Palace, London, over 150 breakfasts, lunches, and dinners are served to the permanent officials, servants, and attendants who form the Royal English retinue.

Rogers' Effortless Humor Is 'Art That Conceals Art'

After giving a course of twenty lectures on personality, a noted psychologist saw Will Rogers on the screen. "That fellow," he said, "demonstrates in 20 minutes what I've been trying to say in 20 hours."

When Rogers, whose latest Fox starring picture, "Ambassador Bill" opens Sunday at the Saenger Theatre, first broke into fame as Vaudeville's cowboy philosopher, he'd often finish a story and a ruse with the remark: "Good luck that time. The trick ain't the joke came out just even!" He made it look like an accident, but it's an art.

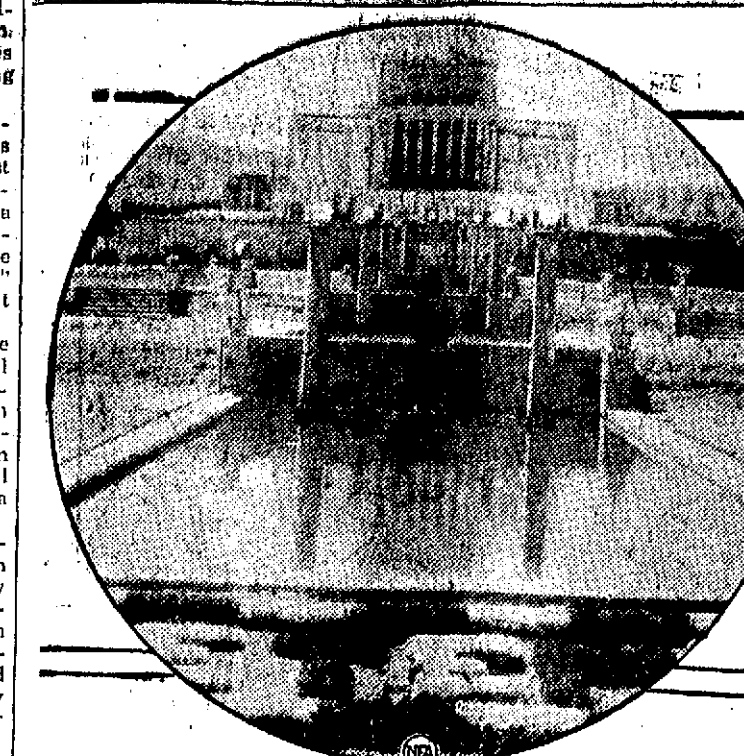

Everything that Rogers does is the perfection of casual, effortless, natural art. On the radio, as syndicated humorist and front page paragrapher, in musical revues and in movietone comedies, he captivates millions. He's an American habit and an international hit. Where there's a Will there's a Wow!

Will Rogers was born in Indian Territory. Oologah—which any baby can pronounce—marks the spot. He grew up without entering any beauty contests and became a ranch hand. When the steers failed to appreciate his humor, he went into vaudeville. Ziegfeld made him a star in the Follies. Today he is probably the most quoted writer in existence.

The advent of the talking screen beckoned him to a new pinnacle of fame. "They Had To See Paris" "So This Is London" "Lightnin'" "A Connecticut Yankee" and "Young As You Feel" have permanently enriched the galaxy of nations.

"Ambassador Bill" is heralded as a Rogers "natural." In it, we see the famous "self-made diplomat" as the philosophical American ambassador to a little kingdom torn by royal loves and political intrigue. Soon with Rogers in this new comedy drama are several popular favorites, including Marguerite Churchill, Greta Nissen, Tad Alexander, Gustav von Seyffertitz and Ray Milland.

"House of the Lord in Hawaii" Is Beautiful Mormon Temple

Mormon Temple in Honolulu... the angel Moroni beside the angel Gabriel.

The Mormon Temple at Honolulu, Hawaii, is one of the architectural beauties of the world.

It commands an inspiring view of the Pacific on one side, and the rolling hills and luxuriant valleys of the Isle of Oahu on the other. It stands near the picturesque village of Laie.

So great has been the progress of the Mormon religion in Hawaii that five years ago it was reported that more than half of the total Hawaiian population had acknowledged the leadership of the Latter Day Saints.

Notice the people about you; in your neighborhood, in business, in every walk of life. The ones worth while are those who carry their religion into their every-day affairs; who attend church regularly and take an active part in the things the church is doing. Association with such people is the surest way to gain for oneself the attitude of mind which brings peace, contentment, and joy.
